The temperate rain forest is a lush environment where club moss' are draped in long tendrils from the branches of bigleaf maples, diffused light shimmers through a high canopy of evergreen trees, and an emerald carpet of mosses, ferns, lichens and tiny plants cover the forest floor. Summer fog, mild temperatures, and over 140 inches (12 feet) of annual rainfall combine to create an ideal environment for the dense forests, lush undergrowth, cascading streams and waterfalls. Some of the largest Douglas-fir, Sitka spruce, Western hemlock, and Western redcedar are known to exist in the Olympic rain forest. Mosses, lichens, ferns, and many kinds of wild flowers thrive in the cool climate of the temperate rain forest.

QUINAULT HIKES FOR ENJOYING WATER SCENERY:

The Quinault Rain Forest Nature Trail is a short 0.5 mile loop trail that can be walked in 45-60 minutes.

Interpretive signs provide information on many rain forest features. A narrow gorge cut by a cascading stream, dense vegetation, towering conifer trees, a bog, and a nurse log are some of the interesting features seen from this trail. The Quinault National Recreation Trail provides an extended 4-mile walk, beyond the short Nature Trail, deep into the rain forest and along the shore of Quinault Lake. Allow 2 to 3 hours to hike the National Recreation Trail. This loop trail can be accessed from the F.S. Quinault Office, Lake Quinault Lodge, both Willaby and Falls Creek Campgrounds and at the back of the Quinault Rain Forest Nature Trail loop. A free trail map is available at the F.S. Quinault office.

This waterfall is viewed from the South Shore Quinault Road and a NW Forest Pass is not necessary to view the falls. Parking is very limited, use caution.
